We have not deviated from our fixed one-class model policy.

But we have refined and developed the Maxwell.

The new compensating under-slung rear springs mean comfort for you and preservation of your car.

This is the type of spring used in the newest models of many of the highest priced cars.

The wheel base is six inches longer—the frame has been strengthened—the windshield sloped, the body lines made more graceful, and the body made roomier.

But the Maxwell price stands at a figure which still makes it "the world's greatest motor car value."

Approval of Commissioner Donohue

Is All That Remains to Bring Deutschland Settlements to Completion—Administrators' Accounts Were Approved Tuesday in Probate Court.

Accounts of administrators of the estates of the five men who were drowned when the German merchant submarine Deutschland rammed and sank the tug T. A. Scott, Jr., of the T. A. Scott Co., in the Race last winter, were approved by Judge Arthur B. Calkins in the probate court at New London Tuesday morning. The approval of the accounts by Judge Calkins is one of the final steps in the settlement of the suits which were brought by the administrators of the estates of the men against the German Ocean Navigation Co., which owned the submarine.

The amounts allowed in the probate court total $22,900 and the claims against the defendant company for the deaths of the five men approximated $200,000. The amounts allowed the various estates were: estate of Clarence B. Davison, $4,500; estate of William A. Caton, $4,500; estate of Edward O. Jackson, $3,350; estate of Eugene Duzant, $2,250. Attorney C. Hadlai Hall of New London was administrator of the estates of Gurney, Jackson and Duzant; Charles S. Amason was administrator of Caton's estate, and John Davison was administrator of Davison's estate.

The settlement in the cases was reached some time ago between the administrators of the various estates and the insurance company which the submarine was insured since which time the estates have been in process of settlement. Accounts of the administrators were filed with the probate court Tuesday morning and all that remains to be done to bring the settlements to a completion is the approval of Compensation Commissioner J. J. Donohue of Norwich.

ANNUAL REPORT OF PRESTON HEALTH OFFICER

There Has Been No Epidemic of Any Kind During the Past Year.

During the past year there has been no epidemic of any kind existing in the town and the general health of the residents of the town has been good, says Everett P. Barnes, town health officer of Preston, in his annual report to the board of selectmen of Preston. There has been reported to me, he continues, forty-eight cases of pulmonary tuberculosis, one case of bone tuberculosis, four cases of diphtheria and one case of scarlet fever; 54 cases in all; of which 49 cases were reported from the Norwich State Hospital.

No one in the town reported any nuisance to me, which proves that the town of Preston is a clean town as far as nuisances are concerned.

He fumigated a schoolhouse and several houses. Several certificates of health were granted and written permissions were given to children to attend schools in other towns.

All cases reported to me were given my immediate attention and I took every precaution against the spread of any disease.

MANY WOMEN IN HOME ECONOMICS COURSE

Enrollment Is Already Far Beyond That of Last Year.

The enrollment of women in the four year home economics course of the State College at Storrs cannot be reached a mark far beyond the enrollment of last year and applications are still coming frequently to the college. (With the opening date still several weeks away the authorities are much pleased at the interest being shown in the course as now outlined.

The demand for women trained in the home economics work is at present greater than the supply. County farm bureaus, city organizations, high schools, and other secondary schools, as well as state and federal departments, are asking for women trained in the science of home-making who can assume leadership in various phases of the work at good salaries. The State College at Storrs cannot meet the demands made upon them and for that reason every effort is being made to increase the enrollment for this year. Arrangements have been made whereby women having had two years' work in a normal school of the first grade may transfer to the State College and upon completion of two years' work in home economics receive her degree.

By thus capitalizing the work which many women have already completed and concentrating on home economics as a specialty during the last two years, the State College can turn out women capable of taking over leadership in home economics two years from now instead of four years as would be necessary where no college training has been had. "We must meet the call for trained women," said President Charles L. Beach, Tuesday. "The new bill passed by congress which carries with it funds for a greatly increased programme in home economics and agriculture creates a demand for scientifically trained men and women." "We must furnish these men and women if the plan is to succeed. The Connecticut Agricultural College will do its part in providing these leaders," said President Beach.

A Lively Corpse.
The Meosup Journal says: John Wood, who has recently been receiving treatment at the state hospital, enjoys telling how his naturally strong constitution got the best of the attending physician. He was in rather bad shape one evening when he heard the doctor say to the nurse that the man Wood could not live through the night. Perhaps, overhearing this remark, the man's will power would be pretty sure to assert itself. Anyhow, when the nurse visited his room at about midnight he was surprised to see him sitting up in bed, and an hour or two later he was walking about the room. When the doctor called the next morning he noted the empty bed and inquired of the nurse what he had done with the body. "That body, doctor," he replied, "is out on the veranda walking around!"

Mobilizing by Telephone

Scattered all over the country, in every State in the Union, are the training and mobilization camps of the soldiers of the Republic.

Here, men are being specially trained to lead; there, the raw recruits are being whipped into shape; here, men are learning the art of flying and there drilling with the big guns.

It has been a part of the task of the Bell System to supply telephone service and equipment for this important phase of the nation's military activity and for the many camps where our citizen-soldiers have been temporarily concentrated.

Each important camp has its special switchboards with a trained operating force; pole lines linking even the farthest outposts with headquarters, and bringing all under direct central control.

Many new lines have been built to give ample connections with the headquarters of military departments, state capitals and with the National capital. This has required large additions to central office equipment in adjacent towns and cities and large increases in the number of operators.

The great military cantonments in various parts of the country now under construction, which will house more than 600,000 men, will require a vast additional amount of telephone apparatus and equipment.

In addition to the constantly increasing needs of the Government for telephone service and equipment, we must also meet the great and growing needs of countless industries expanded and accelerated by the war.

Only by the most conservative use of every available resource can these great demands for telephone service be adequately met.
